ALBANY-DECATUR DAILY

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS AND UPBUILDING OF ALBANY-DECATUR, ALABAMA

VOLUME XII

ALBANY, ALABAMA, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1924.

JOHN W. DAVIS GIVES REASONS FOR OPTIMISM

ATTEND THE DAILY'S ELECTION PARTY

MORGAN'S GINNINGS ALREADY ARE WELL OVER LAST SEASON

Three Thousand More Bales Ginned Up To October 18th

THIRD PICKING IN SOME OF FIELDS

Increased Business In All Sections Of County Now

Statistical reports on the condition of the cotton crop in Morgan county were given out this morning by W. Davidson, county statistician, on top conditions, crop productions and crop demands. Mr. Davidson announced that the number of bales ginned up to October 18th this year stood at 11,862 for the county. At the identical period last year the number of bales ginned stood at 8,902. The figure shows an increase of nearly 3,000 bales over the last year record at this time.

The ginning companies in Albany-DeCATUR have been forced to run night in an effort to keep the demand on them equal with the supply of cotton. The bulk of the ginning has been done in Albany-DeCATUR with itselle, Falkville and Somerville and other smaller communities in the county coming in for a share of increasing business.

The highways leading to Albany-DeCATUR and the principal thoroughfares of the cities are loaded with wagons carrying the staple as it has been picked from the snow white bolls.

Some of the fields are being picked for the third time, which in itself is an evidence of the decrease of boll weevil damage that has failed to show up any extent this year. Further testimony as to the productiveness of the fields in the northern Alabama belt is seen in the statement of a number of agriculturists to the effect that the fields in some cases will yield more in a bale to the acre.

Something of local interest is seen in the use of the immense Malone amusement park for the storage of baled product over the entire district. This hasn't been seen for several years although older inhabitants are that it was not an unusual occurrence in the past years to see the bolls of the Roundtree Lumber company and the Malone Amusement park near the Louisville and Nashville tracks covered with the bales stacked one to the other.

As another feature to the immense crop that has been yielded in Morgan county is seen the increase in business in the cities. Merchants report invariably that conditions are returning back to normalcy and with the crop that has made the southland famous added to by the other yields marketed it is thought that a period of unusual prosperity will be enjoyed.

Reports from the other crop conditions in the county bear out the statement that agriculturally the county well up among the leading districts of the state. Increases are seen in production with out variation in the bureau that are operating in effort to aid the farmer in the proper marketing of his product. Indeed the doors of prosperity have been open and the citizenship of Albany-DeCATUR is joining hands with the farmer in proceeding into a period of unity, peace and prosperity.

SERIAL DELAYED

Today's installment of The Sea Hawk was unavoidably omitted from today's issue of the Daily. The publication of the serial will be resumed, Saturday, today's installment being published tomorrow.

GOBLINS WILL GET YOU IF YOU "DON'T WATCH OUT"

Tonight is the night of witches, and the goblins will get you if you don't watch out. For it's Halloween, the season of carnival. Tonight is the evening preceding all hallows, or all saints day, and the custom of its observance comes down to us from the time of the ancients.

Originally it was observed as a festival. Later the younger people took the occasion as one of their own and in earlier generations in this country it was as a time for much merry making.

Still later it came to be a time for pranks.

On the morning following Halloween one was likely to find transportable articles in most any old place, except in the place they had been put originally. The practice was carried to extremes, however, and in recent years officers have kept close watch to prevent anything but innocent fun. The usual warning against damaging mischief was issued today by authorities here.

CITY OF ALBANY TO HALT JAY WALKERS

Streets to Be Marked Clearly In Middle Each Block

The city of Albany officials announced this morning that owing to the increasing danger to pedestrians who persist in jay walking, cutting across the main streets in the middle of the block, a ten foot space will be marked in the middle of the block for a crossing for pedestrians.

With the heavy increase in gasoline driven vehicles it is necessary that such steps be taken in the preservation of human life. People often thoughtlessly dart from behind parked vehicles and risk their own lives rather than walk a few feet further and be safe in crossing at intersections.

Mayor F. L. Carswell stated this morning that the lines would be set on Saturday morning and the pedestrians given until November 10 to conform to the traffic regulations. After that time it is the intention of the city to see to it the regulations are enforced.

Ballot Boxes Are Being Sent Out

Ballot boxes for the outlying precincts in Morgan County are being sent out by officials here. Officials anticipate a very light vote in the county on November 4, although efforts are being made by several organizations, including the League of Women Voters, to get every qualified voter to cast a ballot.

REGIONAL DIRECTOR OF THE BOY SCOUTS HERE ON INSPECTION

Stanley Harris Makes Trip Through North Alabama

VALLEY COUNCIL HOLDS SESSION

Camp Planned for Next Summer As One of the Activities

Stanley A. Harris, regional director of the Boy Scout movement, and a delegate to be one of the most influential men in the United States in Scout work has completed his visit of inspection here and left for other points in North Alabama.

R. J. Seegar, scout executive for the Tennessee Valley council, which comprises the counties of Morgan, Cullman, Limestone, and Madison, Alabama, and Lincoln County, Tennessee was here today in connection with his regular visits to Albany-DeCATUR troops.

The national Scout organization has adopted a definite program of endeavor for the south and southeast for the approaching year and its is planned to organize a troop in every city in those sections.

At a meeting of the scout council held in Huntsville Wednesday evening, definite plans were mapped out for the movement in this section of the state. There now are 20 active troops within the Tennessee Valley council, including two troops in DeCATUR and one troop being organized in Albany.

Leaders are working on the plan of obtaining the sponsorship of every church for one or more troops. Independent troops also will be organized in some sections. These independent troops must be sponsored by three or more American citizens of good reputation and character. The movement is a local proposition throughout, with professional training offered for the scoutmasters.

It was pointed out by Mr. Seegar that all Scouts are identified with the national organization. Unless a Scout's name is carried on the rolls of the national organization, he is not a full fledged scout.

Camp Planned.

One of the activities planned by the Tennessee Valley Council is the establishment of a boy scout camp at some central location by next summer when it will be formally opened, under Scout supervision.

Arrangements will be made whereby every boy scout will have an opportunity to spend three ten day periods in the camp during the summer vacation period.

Wednesday evening a banquet was given, attended at 25 Tennessee Valley Scoutmasters, when plans for the year were discussed and arrangements made for complete co-operation of all of the troops in the Valley.

Laundry Opening Been Successful

The opening week of the Quality-Model Laundry during the week inclusive of October 27th through the 31st has been entirely successful according to word from the management. In the prize race for the money that has been offered for the largest attendance of the week the DeCATUR Parent-Teacher association and the Benevolent Society are well out in front of the Central Methodist society having withdrawn in favor of the hospital society.

The contest closes this evening at 5:30 o'clock with words of praise ringing in the ears of the local management of the popular plant for the splendidly equipped and arranged plant of the company.

HUNTSVILLE AND ANNISTON SEEKING NEXT CONFERENCE

Strong Offers are Made By Two Cities To Land Meeting

SIGHT SEEING TRIP PLANNED

Trial of the Presiding Elder Is Nearing

(Associated Press) TALLADEGA, Oct. 31—Both Huntsville and Anniston are making strong bids for the next meeting of the North Alabama conference which today entered the work of the third day of its annual session here.

A decision was expected tomorrow. Members of the commission trying Dr. J. M. McCluskey of Huntsville expected to conclude the hearing late this afternoon it was stated. More than 40 witnesses were to be called before the commission and most of these have made their statements, it is understood. Dr. McCluskey is charged with "an indiscretion," the nature of which has not been divulged.

The Talladega entertainment committee has the stage all set for a sight-seeing trip for the entire conference late today, that will take the members to every important section of the community.

More than a score of candidates will be admitted to the ministry on trial. Unification, the hospital program and the superannuate endowment movement were the three chief topics before the second day's session of the North Alabama conference. In the case of the former, a resolution postponing any consideration of the question until next year was passed unanimously. The resolution was introduced by Judge M. N. Manning and was signed by a large number of leaders, representatives of both sides of the question. It did not provoke any debate. By this action the conference steered clear of what might have been a long and acrimonious discussion.

By action of the general conference in its special session held at Chattanooga last July, voting on the issue was not to take place until 1925. The resolution just passed stated that "any discussion of the issue at the present session would be premature, unnecessary and contrary to the explicit directions of the general conference." Before unification will become a reality it will take a three-fourths majority in the more than forty annual conferences of southern methodism. Throughout the northern connection a two thirds majority is necessary.

Three Homes Burn In Morning Blaze

Three houses on Cherry Street DeCATUR were burned this morning at 5 o'clock. Two of the houses were totally destroyed while the third was partly covered by insurance. The fire raged for an hour and 40 minutes before being overcome by the efforts of the fire departments of both DeCATUR and Albany.

Tigers Here On Way to Nashville

The Auburn Tigers, 23 strong, passed through here today on the Pan-American, bound for Nashville where they play Vanderbilt in the stadium Saturday afternoon. A number of local football fans were at the station to greet the team.

Auburn appeared husky enough to give Vanderbilt a battle, and Assistant Coach Wilbur Hutsell declared that was what Auburn intended to do.

Zipp Newman sports editor of The Birmingham News, also was a member of the Auburn party.

Salvation Army Officers to Speak

Major A. P. Storey, commander of the Salvation Army, in what is the Salvation Army Division comprising the states of Tennessee, Mississippi, and North West Florida will speak at the Central Methodist church at 11 a. m. Sunday, and at the Church of God on Sixth avenue at 7:30 p. m. Major Storey will be accompanied by Commandant W. M. Bouterse, general secretary for the Dixie Division, Commandant Bouterse will speak at the First M. E. church at DeCATUR at 11 a. m. Sunday and at the Ninth Street Methodist church Albany at 7:30 p. m.

Major Storey and Commandant Bouterse are both good speakers and have had many years service in the army and it will be to the interest of the people of the Twin Cities to hear these men, and it is expected however that the services named will be well attended.

As previously announced there will be a get together luncheon at the Y. M. C. A. Monday night. J. C. White will have charge of this meeting and Major A. P. Storey will be the chief speaker.

The following services will be conducted by the local Salvation Army Corps: Sunday 2:30 company meeting; Sunday 6:45 street meeting; Tuesday 6:45 street meeting; Tuesday 7:30 Salvation meeting; Thursday 6:45 street meeting; Thursday 7:30 Salvation meeting.

Major Storey and Commandant Bouterse will also be in charge of several street services conducted on Second avenue Albany and Bank street DeCATUR, Saturday afternoon and Saturday night.

GREAT FIRE LOSS IN ALABAMA TOWN

Capital Truck Makes Record Run to Scene Of Disaster

(Associated Press)

UNION SPRING, Ala., Oct. 31—The Union Springs and Montgomery fire departments early this morning had checked the flames which broke out last night. Officials of the two departments estimate the loss at $150,000. The Southern Cotton Oil company and the Birmingham and Southeastern railroad, the Union Springs Compress company and a residence owned by R. W. West were destroyed.

At least a dozen other buildings including the new three story school building are said to have been seriously threatened. The fire was confined to one block.

Fearing that the flames would not beyond control officials called upon the Montgomery department for assistance. A record run was made from Montgomery by a truck in charge of J. B. Davis assistant fire chief.

The depot with all essential freight records and other properties of the Birmingham Southeastern railway was a complete loss. The main building and office of the oil company was not burned.

Chief Rosensthill of the local fire department was painfully injured when he stepped on a large nail.

PEOPLE OF EVERY POLITICAL FAITH IN DEMOCRATIC CAMP

Candidate Declares the Lovers of Honesty Join His Cause

STATEMENT FULL OF HIGH HOPES

Calls Attention To the Action Taken By Trades Unions

(Associated Press) NEW YORK, Oct. 31—In his fourth statement setting forth democratic views on campaign issues John W. Davis, democratic nominee for president explained his reasons for "the spirit of optimism outstanding today in the democratic camp."

Mr. Davis summed up what he said was the "cumulative evidence of the last few days and took occasion to express his gratitude to associates on the party ticket for a well defined movement which is bringing to many recruits to our ranks."

In part the statement reads: "The steadily increasing support now publicly being pledged by so many who, heretofore, have been supporters of other candidates, or affiliated with other political parties is extremely heartening."

"Men and women of every political faith are declaring that they intend to vote the democratic ticket next Tuesday."

"Of course there is a reason—a reason. It is not far to seek. The campaign of evasion and deception conducted by the republicans is breaking down. They have been unable to avoid the vital issues of this campaign. Silence—their motto—has failed to convince. They have been unable to divert the people from the path of duty and their determination to have a clean, honest and efficient government."

"From every section of the country these men and women who believe in integrity in government are pledging themselves to support the great doctrine set forth in our platform."

"They realize full well, that only in the tried and proven democratic party can they secure that relief which is so necessary if this nation is to have restored to it a government responsible to the will of the people themselves."

"Yesterday the executive council of the central trades and labor council of greater New York—an organization representing one fifth of the entire membership of the American Federation of labor, was good enough to publicly pledge its support to the democracy. It recognized the fact that it can depend on the democratic party—when it is restored to power in Washington on March 4 next—to redeem all of its pledges and that Senator LaFollette cannot possibly be elected next Tuesday."

"Yet this was only another chain in the sequence of events which started when the Hudson County, New Jersey, trades council endorsed the democratic platform and its candidate. This was followed by the endorsement of the international printing pressmen and assistants union; by the endorsement of a host of independent labor organizations, by the building trades organizations and numerous others. Now, right here in New York where the issues are well understood, President Sullivan and his associates proclaim that 'parties and men are to be judged by past performance.'"

"I welcome that assertion. The democratic party stands squarely on its record and my confidence in the intelligence and character of the American people persuade me that scarecrows and bogey men will not turn them from the path of duty, and, it

Falkville Battles Independents To A Scoreless Tie In A Thrilling Tilt

The Independents journeyed to Falkville on Thursday afternoon to meet the strongest combination the Falkville inhabitants could muster and the game rocked along in an evenly matched affair until the referees whistle announced the end of the conflict with things still even.

Falkville showed an unexpected drive in the first quarter when they drove to within the 20 yard mark of the Independents during the first few minutes of play, but the line held and the ball went over due to some pretty defensive tactics on the part of Ellison and Hartselle backing up the line. This was the first and only opportunity of the Falkville team to score.

After the first quarter the Falkville team was outplayed and out generated the rest of the way but managed to hold when their goal line was endangered. Three attempts at field goals failed on account of the condition of the playing field, it being impossible to make the ball go true with the unevenness of the ground.

The Independents were led in line play with the work of Watson at right tackle and Bowen at left tackle. These men were in practically every play and broke up all Falkville efforts to advance. Kirby went well at center while the guard positions were impregnable with Byers, Walker and Cobb who substituted stopping the Falkville attack. Handy who substituted for Speer was noticeable in defensive work often getting the man behind the line of scrimmage. Captain Ellison, McRee, Hartselle and Gustin were all good in the backfield roles, with Hartselle and McRee driving the line and Ellison and Gustin chasing around the ends.

In the last half the Independents fought Falkville back to her own goal line on several occasions but lacked the last punch to take the oval across. Falkville was noticeably weak in the latter half of the game and took repeated time out to prevent a battering down that seemed almost certain to come.

The game was marred with wrangling from both teams, the condition of the field and the great clouds of dust that frequently cut the spectators line of vision from the opposing elevens.

It is thought that Falkville will possibly make a Thanksgiving date here with the Independents as both local high school elevens are slated for out of town games. Although the Falkville aggregation outweighed the local line it is believed that a Thanksgiving melee will show a distinct advantage to the Independent team.

Next week sees the Independents being called to colors against the Fairbence Normal aggregation. Normal lineup contains some notables of past years including the Arthur brothers who for some years galloped over the gridiron in Sheffield livery. They offer a heavy team and the Y. people will be sorry tried before a decision is gained.

Word from up Petersburg way is to the effect according to some local followers of preppers that Floyd Tuck received a minor injury to his collar bone in the game.

on Thursday. The last year Central luminary has featured in all of Morgan's games this year and will be seen locally when the Morgan aggregation comes on the 14th to play the local Independent team. Tuck has many friends here who are glad to learn that he wasn't injured severely.

is not alone in the ranks of the workers that I secure my note of confidence in the election. Recall the list of republicans: of the voters of independent political affiliation; of the men and women of every walk of life who have announced their intention of supporting the democratic party at the polls next Tuesday and you have the compelling reason for the spirits of optimism outstanding today in the democratic camp.

There has been an increasing realization on the part of the farmers that their only hope for badly needed relief was in the democratic party. Merchants, clerks, and business men generally also know that this is so.

"This nation is threatened today vastly more by re-action and privilege than by radicalism. Radicalism will indeed grow in proportion to the blind greed for money and the improper use of the power of money. I therefore call for volunteers among all of those who love their country more than their party; who are influenced more by principle than prejudice and who have abiding faith in the ideals which have made this nation morally and materially great, to be united in efforts to overcome the menace of greed and class materialism.

"Our prosperity is indeed threatened, not because the republican tenure of office is menaced but by the undermining of confidence."

SHALL THERE BE "PITLESS PUBLICITY" FOR INCOME TAX RETURNS

The government will bring suits to try out the publicity laws for income tax returns and what the result it must be binding, but other tax records are open to all, and may be freely published according to all reports so why should such resistance be shown to the publication of income tax returns.

Some interested in less publicity for incomes have claimed that to make public property of the income tax returns would be humiliating.

If honest returns have been made where is the disgrace. It is admitted that the income tax records are open for inspection but not available for newspaper publicity. But what is the difference. If the news of the income returns of persons may be handed around from mouth to ear, there is lack of logic in the argument that all cannot know about all tax income returns. The chief opposition to such publicity is that competitors might find out too much about each others affairs.

But an income tax return is not information as to exactly what ones salary is, and besides such a rule applying to all would work no hardships on any particular group of business men.

The real objectors to larger publicity for income taxes are doubtless the people who wish to appear to have a smaller or a larger income than they have in reality. Because "pitless publicity" for income tax returns means the catching of many tax dodgers, the general public will welcome it.

Any newspaper can get the real and personal property values why should they be barred from making the income tax lists available to all the people.

ONE OTHER NOTED SOUTHERNER GONE TO HIS REWARD

Not many who knew of the live and character of General W. B. Haldeman who at the time of his death, recently, was the commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans have with hld tributes to his memory, all full of sincere praise for the fallen leader.

General Haldeman drew much consideration and respect from Southern people because he came toward the South from his northern Kentucky home a young man and joined the Confederate army at the outbreak of the civil war.

It is declared that devotion to the South was a passion with the late commander of the Confederate Veterans. Human kindness and a deeply sympathetic nature are said to have drawn friend and a foe like to the departed hero. He was a strong partisan but never a hater of his opponents. General Haldeman spent most of his active life in Louisville where he and his famous father, Walter N. Haldeman had large newspaper interests. He was at one time the editor of the Louisville Times, and was associated with his father in the publication of the Louisville Courier-Journal.

It is said that at the time of his death, W. N. Haldeman, father of the general, was the most trusted and most prominent man in Kentucky, and that General Haldeman inherited many of the noble traits of his father.

Until six years ago he was active as the editor of the Times and up until the time of his death was deeply interested in the progress and development of his stat and the entire southland. With the departure of General Haldeman—always true to his friends and true to his convictions—the country loses another one of the Southern gentleman or the old school.

GOBLINS SHOULD BE CAREFUL ON HALLOWE'EN NIGHT

More than one newspaper, for the past few days has carried letters from anxious parents and law-abiding citizens, asking all who have children under their care either to keep them off the streets Hallowe'en night or else have a guardian accompany them.

Such letters cite instances where death has resulted from rash acts of children committed during Hallowe'en celebrations in the name of "fun." It will be recalled that a few years ago during the excitement incident to a night of fun a local boy was ground to death under the wheels of a vehicle. Some years ago in another city a boy was seen to go down a residence street one night as a goblin, and to throw a heavy piece of iron through a window glass and the weight landed on a little girl who was sick in bed near the window. The same boy went further, and broke into a small store and took a lot of candy—all in the name of "fun."

It has been a frequent sight in the Twin Cities to see house steps removed, lumber misplaced, and business property and homes greatly damaged on mornings after Hallowe'en.

Such things ought not to be. Where anyone makes liberty a license to do wrong things, he and not those against whom the wrong is done should suffer. Officers will doubtless keep that truth in mind on Friday night, as well as at other times.

But no wrongs need to be committed. No property need be injured or destroyed and no serious injuries sustained, if one and all will exercise a due care on Hallowe'en night.

Navy Is Pulling For Army Game

Students at the naval academy at Annapolis are pulling hard to win the annual game with the Army, according to an interesting letter received here by D. C. Adams from his son, Malcolm Adams, now a student at the academy. The letter follows:

United States Naval Academy
Annapolis, Maryland

Dear Dad:—

Things are going along about as usual. Some of my subjects are pretty easy for me because of the foundation I had in high school, but the course is rapid and I am struggling hard to make a good record which will be a credit to mother and you.

We are all pretty much wrought up now over football. Our big game as you know, is with Army and we are rooting as hard as we can to put the team in the proper frame of mind to win the Army game. A good man of us turn out for song practice while the team is ploughing through the mud to cheer them up a little and make the bumps seem less fearful.

We are going to have a Regimental Review on the afternoon of the 27th, in honor of Navy Day. I wish you and mother could be here to see it. It is fine to see the whole Regiment swinging along to the tune of "Anchor's Aweigh." That is when we all feel proudest. President Coolidge has approved the observance of this day throughout the United States. Every one along the coast knows more or less about the Navy, but the people inland know very little about us. According to the treaty we are supposed to have a Navy equal to Great Britain's and two fifths larger than Japan's. Unfortunately these are only suppositions. The apathy of the country as a whole towards an efficient Navy has its reflection through out the service and the Navy League instituted Navy Day to bring the subject before the people.

I know that you are up to your neck in business and have little time for thoughts of other things. However, I am sure that you carry both life and fire insurance. The Navy as we have been told so often by those higher up, is the cheapest form of national insurance. There is a book by Mahan called "The Influence of Sea Power on History," which shows that there never has been a country which amounted to anything without having a first rate Navy.

The navy is striving to move to an equality with Great Britain, but, of course, the Navy has to abide by the judgment of the people of the United States, in whose employ we are. If you all don't back us up, you won't have any Navy. Inasmuch as the Navy is educating me and offering me a career, it seems that you ought to be a booster and that you ought to know a little more about the service than does one who has no direct interest in it aside from his interest as an American citizen. If you really believe in the Navy, talk about it; tell some one else so, and tell them why you think the Navy is an important national asset. Little drops of water, you know.

With love to all of you.
Affectionately,
MackAuction Will Take New Form Locally

The Ladies Benevolent Society hospital will hold a very interesting auction at the store of Rahm Clothing Co. tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock. A suit of clothes valued at $50 has been donated outright by the Rahm Clothing Co., and the proceeds of the sale will be given to the hospital.

In bidding on the suit there can only be bids at the rate of 5c. This will be entirely different from any other auction ever held here, as some one will be assured of getting the suit on a 5 cent bid, thus giving everyone an opportunity of bidding and helping the hospital. Large crowds are expected and the ladies of the Benevolent society will be on hand and act as cashiers to receive all moneys from the sale.

The following ladies have been named by Mrs. Guyton of the hospital association to serve as the committee Mrs. W. R. Smith, Mrs. R. H. Wolcott Mrs. J. W. Pipkin, Miss Louise Almon Miss Sarah Blackwell, Mrs. Georgia Ee Miller, Mrs. Will Wyker, Mrs. R. G. Cortner, Mrs. T. A. Bowles, Mrs. Brentz Preuit, Mrs. A. A. Jones, Mrs. R. T. Sheppard. Everyone is urged to be present with nickels.

Rev. Wallace To Occupy His Pulpit

Dr. J. D. Wallace, pastor of the First Presbyterian church has sufficiently recovered from his recent illness to conduct services at his church Sunday morning when the sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be celebrated following the sermon by Dr. Wallace at 11 a. m.

FARM NOTESBy J. C. Ford County Farm AgentFeed Crops

With corn at $1.50 and hay $35.00 and Morgan County short on both, the time is ripe for sowing oats. Fall oats are most profitable. Sow in an open furrow. If they get killed, sow again in the spring.

Lespedeza Seed

Now, since frost, is the time to save lespedeza seed. W. L. and J. E. Bal- lew have just saved theirs with a home made pan, and were surprised to find that the pan filled up so quickly. Clover, two inches or more in height will yield a good lot of seed.

Save Pea Seed

It is being predicted that seed peas will be worth $4.00 to $5.00 a bushel next spring. Save every one in sight. The demand will be greater than the supply.

Last week the Alabama farm bureau cotton association received more than nine thousand bales, according to a report sent out Monday by W. D. Barton, director of the field service. That is the best week in the history of the association. An effort is to be made to make this week another big week for deliveries.

With fifty thousand bales already booked in Montgomery and more than a thousand being delivered daily, the association has every reason to expect this to be a record year.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock today at the home of Robt. Collier, Priceville. The body will be shipped to Oxford, Ala., for burial. The deceased is survived by a son, M. E. ## A WIFE'S CONFESSIONAL

Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

What Bess Dean Told Midge About Alice Stockbridge.

I have imagined many meetings with Bess Dean since the day when by an old ruse—pretending that I knew something discreditable concerning a past episode in her life—I effectually thwarted her machinations against Leola Durkee. But in all those fancied meetings she has turned upon me a face bitter and malevolent, and when she came toward me from the farther end of the Bayview butcher shop, I did not like my eyes to meet the hostile glare which I was sure I could see in hers.

The next second I felt her hand clasp me on the shoulder in the old, comradely salute which she always gave the colleagues she liked in our teaching days together, and when in astonishment I looked at her, saw nothing but the old friendly mockery in her glance, although I fancied that far back in her eyes I caught a glint of a far different feeling.

"Can't You Play Up?" "Well, if it isn't the old sleuth herself," she gibed. "How are you? Still hitting on all six?" She lowered her voice, as I stared at her blankly, too bewildered at her extraordinary attitude in the face of what lay between us to attempt speech or motion.

"Come, come, 'you play up,'" she asked tensely. "Or do you play?" I came to life swiftly. For some reason or other she wished to ignore the unfortunate series of incidents which had been brought to a head at our last meeting, and although my experience of the girl warned me to be wary, yet I could not refuse such extraordinary overtures without laying myself open to the just accusation of being rude—and—

"At least on five," I returned, making a valiant effort to smile. "And you, but I don't need to ask. You are looking—"

"As happy as a girl who has danced with the Prince of Wales," she retorted, walking with me to the counter, and standing sedately by while I ordered and paid for the steak we were to broil outdoors. Then she went on with me to the door, and looking up and down the street, said tensely:

"Tell those kids to get into the car, I've got something I want to say to you."

I did not resent her imperious manner, for I felt that in our last encounter she had had so much to do with it that I could afford to be generous. Therefore, I handed the steak to Katie and instructed her to put Marion and Junior into the car. Then I turned to Bess, who, secure in the fact that no one was within earshot, and that her face was turned from everyone's vision but mine, permitted herself a tiny betrayal of the hatred which I knew was lurking in her heart for me.

Bess Dean Remembers. "Don't think I've forgotten the surly trick you played me," she began venomously, but I interrupted her quickly.

"I have no illusions whatever concerning you, Bess," I said quietly, "or your feelings toward me. I simply am playing up, as you asked me to do."

"It's not for myself I'm asking it," she retorted. "I'd see you in the hot place until the glacial age returned and it froze solid, before I'd either ask you for anything or lift

VARIATIONS OF THE SMART FELT HAT

The Newest Felts Are as Fashionable with Filmy Frocks as Tailored Costumes

By ANNETTE BRADSHAW

THE latest fashion hints from abroad assure us that the French are wearing small felt hats with costumes of every type. This means that the felt is as smart for wear with a filmy afternoon frock as it is for wear with the more tailored modes of afternoon.

A few of the felt models are medium instead of small, but practically none of them are large. Where the larger hats are seen, they are usually of velvet in black or brown or some color to match the frock with which they are worn.

The cunning little upturned hat shown here at the center is of claret felt with a bunch of crosse feathers at either side.

To the right of this is shown a plain black felt with straight brim, with felt swathing the crown and forming two chic knots at the front.

Below this is another cunning little felt showing the smart unbound edge, and having its brim split at the back and crossed to form two points.

Over at the right is a gray felt with a band of oriental braid in lovely soft colors crossing at the front.

The models on the left all follow the smart lines of the diminutive hat. At the top is a hat which combines two colors in its soft gray crown and cherry-colored brim.

Below this is a tiny hat of navy felt stitched round and round. It, too, shows the jaunty bow treatment at the back, plain felt being knotted so that its ends flare east and west.

Down in the lower left-hand corner is another plain little black felt, much the type of the cinnamon brown one. These black felts, with edges cut and unbound, are the most popular of all.

Why Hygienic Living Will Banish Tuberculosis

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

ONE person in every one hundred has active tuberculosis. An equal number has the disease in an arrested or latent form.

This is the conclusion of the National Tuberculosis Association after a seven-year study at Framingham, Mass. It agrees essentially with other reports made in other communities.

A famous Italian pathologist found evidence of active or healed tuberculosis in 597 out of 600 bodies examined. This demonstrates that everywhere in the civilized world this disease is extremely prevalent.

Let me say at once that tuberculosis is decreasing. One death out of every seven used to be caused by tuberculosis. That is not the case to-day.

The disease will become more and more uncommon. We are learning how to live and with increasing knowledge in this direction, tuberculosis is growing rarer.

The average person gives no thought to his breathing. Lots of folks don't know how to breathe. They rarely open more than a fraction of the air cells in their lungs.

If you would protect yourself against tuberculosis, you must breathe deeply. Then you must breathe pure air, day and night. Much depends on how and what you breathe.

Much also depends on how and what you eat. To be well-nourished you must eat enough of the right foods. When you do this and then insure the assimilation of the food through the assistance of the red blood cells, made active and capable by replenishment in lungs well-supplied with oxygen, then you will escape tuberculosis.

All of us are exposed to the dangers of tuberculosis, but they pass us by unharmed if our bodies are well-nourished.

The first line of defense against tuberculosis, and every other disease, is found in hygienic living. If you live in the right way, you will escape all these terrible ailments.

Even though you are so unfortunate as to contract tuberculosis, an immediate correction of your bad living habits will enable you to throw off the disease.

Answers to Health Questions

JEAN Q.—What causes a thirteen-year-old girl to become ill when riding in the street cars?

A.—This condition is probably due to biliousness. Avoid constipation and be careful of your diet for a time, and your trouble will disappear. You should weigh about 165 pounds.

MRS. L. S. Q.—What causes red marks on my arms which grow larger and bleed if they are scratched? Also what causes brown spots on my hands?

A.—This condition might be due to a number of different things. If the spots itch, it may be urticaria; if not, the trouble may be due to ruptured blood-vessels. Without making an examination it would be rather difficult to advise you definitely. See your doctor and have him prescribe for you.

2.—I am fifty-two years of age, 5 feet 7 inches tall. What should I weigh?

A.—You should weigh about 165 pounds.

Dr. Copeland will answer for readers of this paper questions on medical, hygienic, and sanitation subjects that are of general interest. ### How to make Your Neckline Accent Beauty of Your Face

By LUCREZIA BORI

The Famous Spanish Prima Donna

DO you understand your particular style of beauty, so that you can choose your dress to offset it to best advantage?

This knowledge is such an important thing that I feel I cannot impress it too strongly upon my readers.

You ask how it can be acquired? I answer that full knowledge of this kind takes long experience and careful observation. You doubtless know much now about dressing to type, and about the colors and types of garments you can wear, but you doubtless have much to learn.

Don't you often go to buy a hat upon this subject will not be inappropriate.

We all know that the bateau or boat neckline has been in steadfast fashion favor for the past few seasons. This meant that almost everyone had to choose this neckline in buying a ready-made frock, as there was not much variety. Now things have changed.

We have the boat neckline and the rounded one, either uncollared or finished with a Peter Pan collar. We have also the deepest V, the square neck, and for evening the neckline which is rounded in front and slopes to a deep V at the back.

And now a word of warning. If you choose the rounded neckline, which makes it look shorter still. Rather choose the frock with a surplice or V neckline or a neck which is slit at the front and turns its collar back in the manner of a small boy's shirt.

On the other hand, if your neck is unduly long, do not accentuate its length by wearing the long line just mentioned. The more rounded neckline should be very good for you. When you do wear the deeper V neck, you can do away with its too-lengthening effect by wearing also a short necklace which comes about the base of the throat. This shortens the neck. And let it be a tip to the woman whose neck is already short enough. If you come under this head, wear long necklaces rather than short ones.

In view of the changing fashions in necklines, I feel that a few words and feel that you cannot make your final selection without the advice of some friend or someone who will tell you frankly if they like the garment in question upon your person.

You can learn from the advice of friends, and from trying colors and garments yourself, much that will be beneficial to you when you go to choose new clothes.

Make yourself familiar with the good points as well as the poorer ones of your figure, and learn how to dress in accord.

There are, of course, changing fashions from season to season, and I feel that I must constantly warn women to beware lest they choose an unbecoming thing simply because it is smart.

WHERE THE FAMOUS PENNY STEAMERS PLY.

DID you ever take the penny steamers to Kew or Richmond?

If not you haven't thoroughly done London.

The River Thames twists its sinuous way through the great, sprawling city. It is navigated by small, narrow passenger steamers, whose funnels are arranged to fold neatly when passing under the numerous bridges that span the stream, thus avoiding delays at the draws.

They are no longer penny steamers; rising prices make a round trip of the river devoted to factories and piers and warehouses. Gradually the commercial structures fade out and patches of green appear. Then come beautiful residences with gardens running down to the water and every now and then an imposing mansion set in a big park, like the castle of the Duke of Northumberland.

Pretty river villages are passed, with ancient inns facing the water. The pleasure boats thicken; the occupants love to be rocked by the wake of the steamer.

The boat continues to Richmond, where the bank is high and steep. The town of Richmond is built on the hill made famous by the old song: "The Lass of Richmond Hill."

A good dinner in an English inn at Richmond and you have your evening upon the little steamer, being whisked by the underground railroad back to Piccadilly Circus in less than half an hour. It seems incredible that such a rural and romantic setting could be only thirty minutes' distance from the center of a seething London.

Dodging a London Bridge. o Richmond a couple of shillings, at even this is inexpensive for five delightful hours on the water.

The Thames at London bridge is a deep and dirty. On the right, along the river are noticed such sights as the Tower of London, the monument, with its back, and fine houses, like the Cecil and St. James, and the Abbey. For half an hour after a steamer passes through a section

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT A Vast Treasure

Copyright, 1924, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

WELL, of all the sturdy, broad-shouldered, deep-chested, stout-legged, chubby-handed, red-cheeked, blue-eyed, curly-headed little rascals you ever saw! There he stood on the sidewalk in his little play-suit, with his shabby old cap on the side of the back of his head.

We were trying to get into the new house and we couldn't manage it. Something was the matter with the lock—did you ever notice that something usually is the matter with the lock of a new house—till you're used to it?

We pounded and thumped, and then one of us got so cross she actually kicked, and the more we pounded and the harder we thumped the more the door stuck.

The Chinese vegetable man climbed down from his seat in his disreputable old delivery truck—dear me, how it ever gets up these hills without falling to pieces is a miracle of the world—and he pounded and he thumped and he twisted and he turned.

No use! "Somebody went out another door and left the bolt on this one," we said; and, oh, if that somebody had come along just then he would have wished that he and his ancestors had never come to this country at all!

The Japanese houseboy from next door slipped away from his broom, laid down his dustpan and did what he could to help matters out.

He twisted the handle and he shook the handle and he stooped down and blew in the keyhole, then he held the key very close to his eyes and seemed to be muttering some mysterious incantation.

No use! A delivery-boy rang the bell at the next basement, handed in his onions and carrots and butter and things, and came gallantly to the rescue.

He poked and peered and muttered—and then he grinned and said: "Nothing doing"—and was gone, whistling an ancient remnant of an ancient tune that sounded suspiciously like "Home Was Nothing Like This."

"You Need a Man" And all at once from the sidewalk spoke a cheerful treble. "Say," said the treble, "do you want some help around here? I guess you need a man, don't you? I'll be glad to do anything I can."

And there he stood, the little, rugged, broad-shouldered, blue-eyed chap, with his legs wide apart and his shoulders well back. "I guess you need a man!"—bless his heart, and he wasn't a day over five, if he was that much.

So, of course, we told him yes, we did need a man, and, oh, wouldn't he please help us?

And he poked and thumped and twisted and turned—he had to stand on his tiptoes to do it, at that, and then his face lit with the radiance of a great idea.

"I'll run around back," he said. "I'm a good climber. Maybe I can climb in the kitchen window."

And around back he went, and just as we heard him dropping inside the window, something mysterious happened to the lock, and, twist—the door opened like a charm—but I shut it again softly and very quickly. And in a minute there he was at the door—he shot the night-latch, opened the door and stood there, a perfect picture of glorious triumph.

We never told him that the latch had already yielded.

He was radiant with pride. "I told you you needed a man!" he said. It was all I could do to keep from grabbing him in my arms, but I wouldn't have dampened his masculine pride of achievement for anything on earth.

"What would we have done without you?" we said. "Say," he called bravely, "could you lend me a handkerchief? I guess I scraped my knee a little."

His chin quivered and he gulped just a wee bit. "If I was a girl," he said, "I'd just have to cry."

But he didn't cry—not he!—though the tears were very near the surface of those blue eyes of his.

I wonder if his mother knows what a treasure lives in her house.

I wouldn't take a million dollars or a million times a million dollars for him if he were mine—would you?

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I will be seventeen next Spring, and my parents have allowed me to go with boys for about six months. I have four boy friends I go out with, and have been going quite steady with two. These two, I know for an absolute fact, never go out with any other girl.

I never think of any of them in a serious vein, but just consider them good friends—and I have never kissed a boy in my life. Daddy says that I should give them all up, for I am too young. Mother says to go with the one I like best and to give up the rest.

I do like one better than the rest, but my argument is: Why can't I keep on going with all of them and have good times, as long as they are nice? Mother says, with get myself into trouble if I keep on playing with them, but I can't see it that way.

Do you think I should give them all up except the one I care for? TINY.

TINY: It does seem a little unfair for your parents to have allowed you to go out with these young men and then suddenly to insist on your dropping them. If they have changed their minds and think that you are still too young to go out with young men, then I think it is much better for you to give all of them up. Personally, I think it would be better for you to have many friends. It gives them a much more varied experience and prevents them from becoming too much attached to one individual. An attachment of this sort, especially among young people, often leads to unhappiness. Why not have a talk with your mother and explain these things to her? I am sure she will agree.

A greatly enjoyed luncheon was

The call to order was at 10 o'clock with Mrs. A. T. Hanson, county Su-

The first hymn was "Showers of Blessing" with the large number of delegates joining heartily in the sing-

2,000 prohibition agents. He also said

AMUSEMENTS*"THE FOOL"

The first Albany presentation of Channing Pollock's "The Fool" will take place at the Masonic theater, Tuesday, Nov. 4th, where it will be offered for a limited engagement. It is a powerful drama on a natural theme,
the relation of religion and business, capital and labor, and has won extended plaudits from press, public and pulpit. The Selwyns are sending a cast of unusual ability to Albany to interpret the Pollock play. Seats go on sale Saturday morning Nov. 1st.

It sounds like a big order to fill,
when I write that "Bringing Up Father" is known throughout the entire civilized world and then some. Here is a true one. An American sailor on one of the Standard Oil Steamships while on a tour to China with gasoline saw a pair of canary birds in a shop in Shanghai. The idea came to him that they would make a nice present for a little daughter of a former shipmate. He bought them and asked the shopkeeper what names he called them. The "one-lung" storekeeper promptly responded "Jiggs and Maggie". This one, pointing to another bird near by, is "Dinty". The sailorman brought the birds to New York and the name still clings to them, though christened in far off China.
"Jiggs and Maggie". But Dinty still claims China as his home. "Bringing Up Father" by George McManus is by far the most famous cartoon creation in history. As is also the stage play by the same title, the most famous and longingly looked for musical comedy making its yearly visits to every town and city in the United States and Canada. Like Castoria, children cry for it. This season brings "Bringing Up Father in Ireland." All new but the essentials
"Jiggs and Maggie". New names, faces music and dances as well as scenery and comedy, makes the yearly visit of "Bringing up Father" as welcome as spring.

It comes to the Masonic theater on tomorrow for an engagement of matinee and night. Not written by a famous author, not staged by a famous producer. But just plain McManus and that means everything. Get seats right now for grandma and the children.
